One in five Washington women reports being injured by domestic violence sometime in her lifetime.

(Source: The Health of Washington State Domestic Violence, 2004)

At least 30% of all female homicide victims in Washington State are killed by a current or former intimate partner.

Between 1997 and 2001, more than half of the people murdered in domestic violence-related homicides were woman killed by their current or former husbands or boyfriends.

Of the nearly 500,000 men and women in State prisons for a violent crime in 1997, 15% were there for a violent crime against a family member.
