

Law & Justice Brochure Introduction:

The Tulalip Tribes has always provided a forum for Tribal members in which to resolve issues. Some of the first issues the Tribal Court heard were employment issues to protect the rights of employees, and in child welfare cases to protect children. The Tribal Court has grown substantially since that time when the Tribe made the decision to take back jurisdiction over Reservation lands from the State of Washington in 2001. Retrocession allowed the Tribes to create and establish its own Tribal Police Department in which to preserve, protect, and advance sovereignty and self-determination, but equally important to also ensure the protection of life and property. Having a growing Tribal Police Department meant that Tribal Court services had to increase to meet the demands of an ever-expanding population on the Reservation. The Court provides due process and equal protection under the law to all Tulalip Tribal members.

The purpose of the Tulalip Tribes Law and Justice Brochure is to provide information to the Tribal members who receive services through the Tribal justice system.

Tulalip Tribal Court / NICS: The NW Intertribal Court System (NICS) was established in 1979 in response to the provisions of the federal court decision known as the Boldt Decision allowing tribes with fisheries law enforcement and judicial systems to conduct treaty fisheries without state control.

In 1979, Tulalip and many other treaty fishing tribes lacked law and justice systems. The establishment of NICS, melding together the sovereignties of a dozen tribes, satisfied the Federal Court requirement of a tribal court system to handle cases arising from activities of treaty fishing enforcement agencies.

Today, NICS administers the judicial (including pro tems) functions of the Tulalip Tribes and also provides Appellate Court services.

Both the Chief Judge Theresa M. Pouley, and Associate Judge Gary Bass are licensed attorneys (both enrolled Tribal members of the Colville Tribes).

The Tulalip Tribal Court hears cases involving dissolution of marriage, child custody, child support, criminal, guardianship, employment appeals, gaming license appeals, domestic violence, personal protection orders, traffic and youth-in-need of care cases, as well as many other types of cases.

To contact NICS, call Dan Kamkoff, Director (enrolled Lummi Tribal member), NW Intertribal Court System, 20818-44th Ave. W., #120, Lynnwood, WA 98036. Phone: 425 / 774-5808. To contact the Tulalip Tribal Court, please call 360 / 716-4778 for Wendy Church, Court Director (Tulalip Tribal member) or write to: 6103 31st Avenue NE, Tulalip, WA 98271.

Tribal Court contacted artist Mike Gobin (Tulalip Tribal member) of the Tribal Design Dept. to see about acquiring artwork for the courtrooms.

Mike envisioned two large cedar, spindle whorls to be displayed behind the judges' benches in courtrooms I and II. "I carved these pieces in honor of my father Thomas J. Gobin, former Arlington Police Chief (15+ years); the one-time TGA Director; and pastor. He often said, 'people will judge you by the company you keep. You can fool your friends, you can fool your family, but you can't fool yourself.'" His father's Indian name "yəx'əla' si'ab" means man soaring with eagles, a man of high integrity. The innately beautiful wood carvings bear the scales of justice with a salmon design.

These creations are symbolic of justice, sovereignty and Native pride. Mike's been an artist for 45 years mostly painting with acrylics. When the Tribal Design Dept. opened roughly 5 ½ years ago, he started carving under the auspices of artists' James Madison, and Joe Gobin.

Tulalip-Based Juvenile Diversion Panel

(C.A.B.): Since starting the juvenile diversion panel (known as the Community Accountability Board) in July, the C.A.B. has heard forty cases so far. This diversion program is an alternative to the juvenile court process.

The C.A.B. meets monthly with tribal member youths under the age of 18 years old who are arrested for minor offenses and are eligible for participation in the C.A.B. Objectives of the panel are to hold the youth accountable for their actions, foster a change in attitude, impress upon the youth the community is concerned about their conduct, increase awareness of their behavior; and to maximize opportunities for the youth.

Current C.A.B. member volunteers include: Lori Parks, Teri Nelson, Sandy Gotts, Angel Cortez, and Judge Gary Bass. “We all want the youth to be positive, productive members for our community. The C.A.B. is a way to let the youth know that everyone makes mistakes when they are young and deserve a second chance while still holding them accountable for their actions,” said C.A.B. member volunteer Angel Cortez.

We are actively recruiting additional volunteers for the Tulalip-based C.A.B. Volunteers must possess an interest in youth and commitment to the welfare of others; have a non-judgmental attitude; treat youth and families with dignity and respect; be able to hold confidences and respect others’ privacy; be able to communicate effectively; able to work and problem solve with other volunteers; and have prior experience with youth. The C.A.B. meets once a month from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Tribal Court.

If you are interested in being a volunteer, please contact Kevin Crittenden at the Denny Juvenile Justice Center for an application. Applicants will be screened for any criminal record.

Tulalip Wellness Court:

The Wellness Court specifically targets substance abuse in adult offenders within the Tribal Court system. This Court is a 5-stage program that intervenes in substance addiction and criminal behavior by providing an environment of both intense accountability and encouragement by the judge, prosecuting attorney, defense counsel, probation, police officer, treatment, and mental health counselors, education, and employment specialists. This court-centered treatment program works with tribal resource agencies and community members to provide sanctions and incentives that address the participant’s mental, physical, spiritual, and emotional needs.

Wellness Court team has set policies with flexibility in order to assess each person’s unique needs. The team makes decisions based on group consensus. Participants enter the program through the criminal court system.

Eligible participants must have a criminal charge which involved substance abuse, either as an element of the offense, or as a contributing factor to the commission of the offense. The offense must have a maximum penalty (or combined penalty if there are multiple counts or offenses) of 100 days, must not be a felony level (violent offenses), violent offenses involving serious bodily injury, and must not be offenses involving sexual misconduct.

Participants must be willing to enter into either a deferred prosecution, or deferred sentencing agreement, and must have accepted responsibility for the criminal offense that brought them to court. The prosecuting attorney and the defense attorney will assure an order is entered transferring the criminal matter to the Wellness Court.

Elder’s Panel (Tribal Court):

Elder’s of the Tribe volunteer their time to sit on the Elder’s Panel. Panel members include: Donald C. Hatch, Jr., Lee Topash, Arthur H. Williams, Sr., Eleanor M. Nielsen, William G. Shelton, Dale Jones, and Cookie Robinson.

The Panel meets at the Court every 2 weeks to meet with young (18-25 years old), first-time, non-violent offenders who have been charged with minor criminal offenses.

Participation in the Elder’s Panel is voluntary by the offender. If the offender successfully completes the one-year requirements imposed by the Elder’s Panel, the offender’s charges will be dismissed in Court.

The Elder’s Panel may require regular appearances before the Panel; writing letters of apology; community service; substance abuse treatment; impose curfews; UA’s; research of family history, spiritual activity (not necessarily religious); anger management classes; mental health evaluations; and no new law violations.

Tribal Court Judge Bass has referred more than 60 young people to the Panel in the last four years of which fewer than ten percent have returned to the court system.

**Tulalip Tribal Court’s Elder’s Panel were honored by the Washington State Bar Association (WSBA) for the Local Hero’s Award July 24, 2009. The WSBA Board of Governors searches statewide for noteworthy programs that have made substantial contributions to their communities, such as the Tulalip Tribal Court Elder’s Panel.*

Most often, these awards go to lawyers, but in special circumstances, this recognition is bestowed upon non-lawyers.

Congratulations to the important work of the Tulalip Tribal Court Elder’s Panel for their civic contributions to this community, and our young adults. Virginia Carpenter served on the Elder’s Panel when it was given the WSBA award until she retired in 2009.

Tulalip Tribal Prosecutor's Office:

The Tulalip Tribes' Office of the Reservation Attorney (ORA) has two branches: the General Counsel Division (GCD) and the Court Services Division (CSD). The GCD represents the Board of Directors. The Prosecutor is part of the CSD and provides legal counsel to the Tribal Police.

Tribal Prosecutors enforce tribal criminal and civil law violations. Prosecutors are primarily responsible for criminal law violations under Ordinance § 49 (the Law and Order Code) and related ordinances. These include violent crimes, domestic violence, sexual assault, drug and alcohol related crimes, property crimes; as well as gaming, housing, fishing, hunting and non-criminal traffic matters.

Tulalip Tribal prosecutors are entrusted with broad discretion to decide whether or not to file criminal charges when someone is suspected of having committed a crime. The authority to file criminal charges is the power to publicly file an official accusation of criminal misconduct against an individual. When a prosecutor believes that there is enough evidence to support a conviction, he or she may file such charges on behalf of the Tribe.

A criminal charge is a serious accusation and it can affect a reputation, a career, a life – prosecutorial discretion is a power that must be used judiciously. Even when a person is suspected of having committed a crime, a prosecutor has an ethical duty not to file charges if there is not enough evidence to prove the person's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Prosecutors for the Tulalip Tribes are committed to the vigorous, fair and efficient prosecution of crimes on the Tulalip Reservation and to working within the criminal and civil justice systems to enhance the administration of justice.

The CSD / Prosecutor's Office is staffed by: Peter Ashman, Prosecutor; Saza Osawa (Makah Tribe), Assistant Prosecutor; and Tammy Chance, Paralegal.

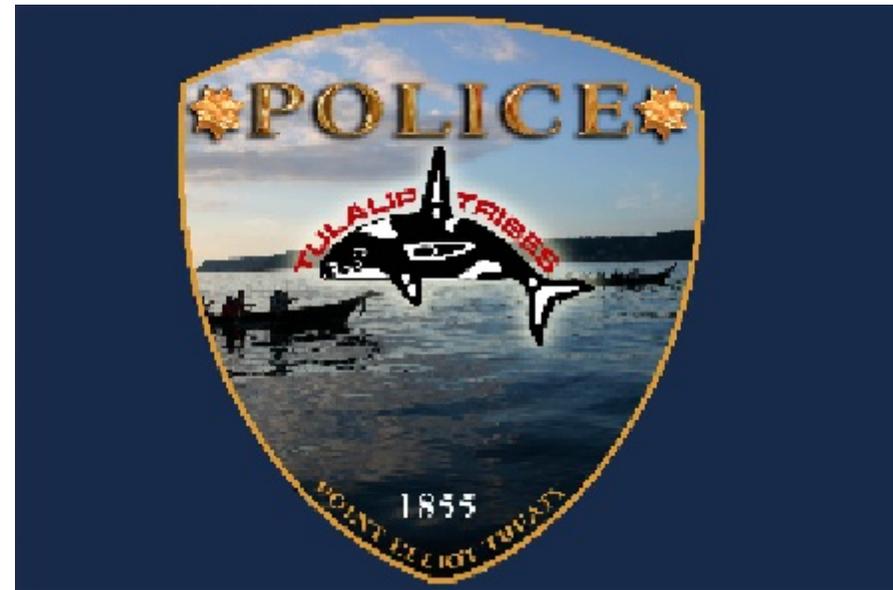

Cynthia Tomkins, Domestic Violence Prosecutor, has been hired through an OVW grant to prosecute crimes of domestic violence.

To contact the Prosecutor's Office, please call 360-716-4810, or write to 6103 31st Ave. N.E., Suite #B, Tulalip, WA 98271.

UW Native American Law Center – Public Defense Clinic:

The Tribal Court Public Defense Clinic at the UW Native American Law Center provides Public Defense services in Tulalip Tribal Court. Under the supervision of Clinic Director Ron Whitener (Squaxin Island Tribe), law students work together in teams with Clinic Supervisors Molly Cohan and Brenda Williams representing tribal members charged with crimes by the Tulalip Tribes. Professor Whitener, Ms. Cohan and Ms. Williams are experienced attorneys with a great deal of knowledge in the areas of criminal and tribal law. This service has been in place since 2002. Second or third year law students may work in the Clinic, they must pass the Tulalip Tribal Court bar exam before being admitted to practice, and they work closely with their supervisors. Funding for this service is supported primarily by charitable contributions from the Tulalip Tribes.

The Defense Clinic represents any Indian who has been charged with a crime by the Tulalip Tribes and whose household income qualifies under Tulalip law. If you are charged with a criminal offense in the Tulalip Tribal Court, you may apply to be screened ahead of time. You may also apply at the time of your first court date.

Applications are available at Tribal Court. If you are eligible for representation, the Clinic counsel will be appointed to represent you by the court at your first hearing. If you are arrested and incarcerated prior to charging, you must appear before the judge at which time you may apply for counsel.

If you want to contact the Clinic, you can call toll free at 1-866-550-2979. If no one answers, leave a message with a good time to call back. Or you may call (206) 616-4201 or (206) 685-3917.
